Bowes is forgotten and falling behind. Derelict houses along the North Circular, flats without recycling, and delays getting to grips with rat running. None of these are difficult problems – what is lacking is the political will and vision to tackle them. This is a symptom of the complacency that comes from having just Labour and Tories in the council – Enfield needs new political blood to bring new energy and new ideas.

Green candidate Laura Davenport says: “People in Bowes are amazed that it has taken so long to tackle rat running. The Council tolerate rundown housing along the North Circular and fly-tipping is getting worse. It could be much better. Bowes deserves energetic councillors who will work positively to speed up solutions to these problems.”

“The election on May 4th is your chance to make a change for the next four years.”

Enfield Green Party chair Peter Krakowiak says: “We also need a much stronger vision of sustainability recognising our impact on other people and the planet as a whole as well as the Greens organised public meetings on the North Circular when no-one else could be bothered immediate area – for starters we need much tougher recycling targets, traffic reduction targets and building standards. Plus using solar power on council buildings to save your money and cut pollution.”

Candidate Bill Linton says: “We need to remind the Council that Bowes still exists. We will do this by being hardworking councillors, listening to residents and acting on your ideas. You have three votes on May 4th, and voting green will make a difference.”

Bowes needs councillors:

who will bring fresh ideas, energy and vision to the council who will listen to and act on your ideas

What you can expect from Green councillors

Greens have been elected to many councils, from inner cities like Leeds and Bradford, university cities like Lancaster and Oxford, to rural towns like Stroud.

In some of these, Greens hold the balance of power, and work with other parties to deliver green policies. In Kirklees, Greens have secured major initiatives in green energy for council buildings, reducing energy bills and pollution. In Brighton, Greens have secured major changes to planning regulations to ensure more energy conservation for new and refurbished buildings. In Oxford, it's traffic, in Lancaster it's a new community centre.

Enfield should follow the example of Huddersfield, which has one twentieth of the entire UK solar power capacity - thanks to Green councillors

London Assembly Greens have won Mayor Ken Livingstone's support for green ideas

In all of these places green councillors bring energy and vision to the needs of their constituents and the needs of the planet. Having councillors from a minority party is no barrier to making a real difference.

In London this year Greens have negotiated 33 radical new policies with Mayor Ken Livingstone. Jenny Jones, one of the assembly Greens, said: "With two seats out of 25 we have to work with others, and by cooperating with Ken we can get significant gains for Londoners in areas such as food, transport, and the community. And we certainly let him know when we disagree – he's particularly weak on protecting green space."

Myths about the Greens

It's a wasted vote

Greens have won council seats in many places. In Bowes we've been talking to residents for over a year, and have already built up a strong following. We think Bowes and Enfield would benefit from energetic Greens, and are determined to win. Don't be talked out of voting green if you are told we can't win.

Greens will take my car away

We won't take your car away - we want people to think. There are journeys you need to use a car for, but most can be made by walking, buses, bikes, tubes and trains. But the bottom line is that cars are polluting and we have to cut asthma, noise, accidents and greenhouse gases. Green councillors work to reduce traffic and improve alternatives to the car.

Nobody's forced to recycle, but most do because it's better for the planet.

It's just about the environment

Greens policies cover all issues, health, education, council housing, peace and defence, and taxation. These are covered on our website, and newsletters, and we can supply you with any amount of leaflets (on recycled paper, of course).

Working on rat-running and the North Circular

When I organised the public meeting in Bowes school in September, I was amazed how many people came. There had been a real lack of information and consultation, and people wanted to find out what was being planned.

Local residents know the local traffic flows, and where the problems and accidents are (like Natal Road). People want to help the council get the rat-running right. I believe that local people must be involved in local planning issues.

On the North Circular, we want to see some of the work done quickly, such as widening Telford Road and closing the turn into Melville Gardens, as well as a quieter road surface and safety measures. But we are totally opposed to demolitions for widening, and want to see TfL houses smartened up and put back into use.

Working on housing, recycling and energy efficiency

I am directly involved in the campaign with local council tenants and trades unions to keep council housing in public ownership, in opposition to the profit-driven ALMO pushed by the Tory council and the Labour government.

We have to be much more ambitious. We need to get recycling to everybody, including those of you on the North Circular. I am working with residents of St Paul's Rise to bring recycling to flats where the council claim it's not possible.

I am also coordinating a group of Bowes residents who want to install solar panels on their roofs, so that we can share information on what is available and get the best deal when it comes to buying equipment. It saves money and cuts pollution – with council support more people would take it up.

Working on rubbish, fair trade and climate change

In our canvassing, one theme keeps recurring: rubbish, fly-tipping and the rats that too often accompany it. I want to get Bowes ward cleaned up: alleyways like the one behind Green Lanes will be gated, CCTV set up in rubbish blackspots. General rubbish should go in wheelie bins, not bags.

I have been campaigning on behalf of the developing world for 20 years, and I am directly involved in having Enfield declared a Fairtrade Borough. If Greens are elected, the Fairtrade vote will be taken at our first council meeting - what a way to start!

My other big concern is over climate change, which threatens civilisation if the human race continues along its complacent way. There are plenty of things Enfield council can do - Woking has cut carbon emissions by 77%, simply as part of an economy drive. Enfield should be heading the same way.
